

KODAK APPROVAL

Endcap Recycling Program

As part of Kodak's commitment to sustainability initiatives, Kodak has introduced new and improved packaging for all media supplied in roll format for the Kodak Approval Digital Color Imaging System, including Kodak Approval Digital Donors and Kodak Approval Digital Intermediate. This new packaging is more structurally sound to better protect the contents, while simultaneously reducing the overall quantity of material used by over 50%. These improvements are part of Kodak's ongoing sustainability thrust and align the Kodak Approval System's focus on packaging with the needs and trends of the packaging market segments it serves.

A key component of the new packaging is the introduction of a new, more structurally sound endcap. The new endcaps made of high-density polyethylene are now stronger, wider, and larger. These new endcaps are 4 times thicker than the previous design, offering a 1 in. (2.5 cm) thick by 8 in. (20.3 cm) square structure. This extra thickness and size give additional protection by providing extra spacing between the roll and the inner lining of the box to prevent the possibility of damage to the Digital Donor. The endcaps are also made from recycled materials, further reducing the quantity of new packaging materials used.

With this new and improved endcap, Kodak is introducing an endcap-recycling program as a further contribution to a sustainable future.

Basics of the Program

1. All Kodak Approval Digital Donors have the same size and shape endcap.
2. Endcaps are to be stacked and placed into a Kodak Approval Digital Donors box. (Please do not use the Intermediate material boxes or return damaged endcaps.)
3. Approximately 22 endcaps can fit into a box of (4 page) 732 mm Kodak Approval Digital Donors.
4. Approximately 12 end caps can fit into a box of (2 page) 394 mm Kodak Approval Digital Donors.
